WORLD'S OLDEST HUMAN DIES AT 150!

LAST PHOTO taken of Beulah Trent appeared in the April 16, 1991, edition of the Weekly World News during her 149th birthday celebration.

Arkansas woman was alive — when LINCOLN was shot!

By KRISTIN MARIS
Special Correspondent

The world's oldest person, whose life stretched from the days of Abraham Lincoln to America's lunar space landings, has died at the incredible age of 150!

Beulah Trent, born nearly 20 years before the start of the Civil War — on March 3, 1842, in Fayetteville, Ark. — outlived her husband, six children, her grandchildren and all but one great-great-grandchild before dying peacefully in her sleep at an Ozark mountain retreat last week.

So fascinating were her stories of bygone years that historians plan to base a book on the ancient woman's recollections. Despite her record-setting longevity she probably won't get credit, though, because of a lack of official government birth records back then.

In an interview with the Weekly World News last year, the nearly toothless oldster said she didn't care about gaining worldwide notoriety for her long life.

"I know how old I am and my memories of my early years are quite clear."

All the wars she lived through — WWI, WWII, the wars in Korea and Vietnam — were tragic, she recalled, but the most horrifying to her was the Civil War. "I can still smell the rottenness of young boys dying in the woods behind our cabin. And I still wake up at night hearing the wailing of slaves being whipped by meaner than mean plantation bosses. Those were hurtful times."

In 1857, Beulah married a young neighbor, Donald Trent, and gave birth to twins a year later. Hubby Donald joined Confederate troops in the battlefield in late 1861, leaving his wife to eek out a living on their dirt poor farm.

"It was rough during the war and when Donald came home we was real poor," recalled the feathery skinned grandma.

"A neighbor told us Lincoln was shot and then we just went on about our business. We had all we could do just to feed ourselves."

Beulah's own grandsons were killed in WWI and memories of the Great Depression were as deeply etched in her mind as the wrinkles that covered her body. Her first recollection of radio was hearing of the bombing of Pearl Harbor, and in a quivering, 149-year-old voice, she could still sing every word of Elvis Presley's "You Ain't Nothing but a Hound Dog" which she heard watching television for the first time.

The grand old lady claimed moonshine and pipe smoking helped her live to a ripe old age but other than that she had no secret formula for her long life.

"I'm ready to go when the good Lord wants me to go," she said a year ago. "I got a husband, my children, my grandchildren and most of my great grandchildren waiting in Paradise for me. I'm looking forward to seeing them again. It's been a long, long time."

Bus rider complained to the wrong man!

Bus passenger Carl Godfrey expected an apology when a man stepped on his foot — but got a bullet in the chest instead!

When Godfrey, 19, complained, the man replied, "I do what I please." Then he pulled out a small caliber pistol and calmly shot Godfrey in the chest. The gunman got off at the next bus stop and disappeared. Godfrey was taken to a hospital in Houston, Texas.

$MILLION BOOBY PRIZE!

Busty smuggler stashes drugs in breast implants

By JACK ALEXANDER
Staff writer

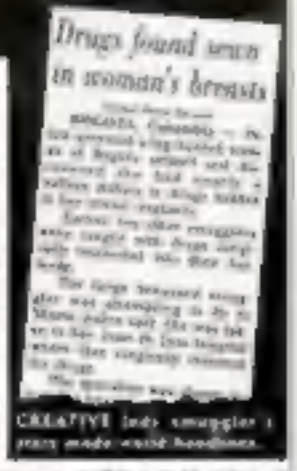
A belle with over-size boobs got busted after suspicious cops discovered her breast implants were worth more than a half-million dollars — in heroin.

Then thousands watched on national television as doctors surgically removed eight one-pound bags of heroin worth $550,000 that had been implanted in the woman's breasts.

The busty drug smuggler caught the eye of alert cops at the airport in Bogota, Colombia, because of her "disproportionately large" breasts.

She was in the process of boarding a plane for Miami when she was arrested. The top heavy smuggler was taken to Bogota's San Juan de Dios hospital where graphic parts of the surgery were shown on national television.

"We noticed her immediately because of her huge breasts. They were way out of line with the rest of her small, thin body," said a narcotics agent. "We had no idea she was a walking gold mine of heroin."



Drugs found in woman's breasts

CREATIVE lady smuggler's story made weird headlines.

Veteran narcotics cops, wise to most of their tricks, are forcing drug smugglers to be more creative in their hiding places for their stash.

Cops recently busted several smugglers with their cocaine surgically implanted in their buttocks.

Gorgeous calendar gal Aja Kimura has a lot more going for her than just a pretty face and a dynamite shape. She is also a talented vocalist who has done several hit videos.

Absent-minded crook forgets gun

A dimwit bandit had to postpone his stickup at a fast-food restaurant — because he forgot his holdup note and his gun!

Cops said the absent-minded crook walked up to an eatery's drive-through window in Ulm, Germany, and after a long pause told an employee:

"Forgot something. Be right back."

Five minutes later, the dimwit desperado returned, handed the lady a note demanding money, stuck a gun

Rat farmers are cleaning up in China

Chinese experts are suggesting a bizarre new source of revenue for their country's farmers: Rats!

They're urging rural peasants to grow the nasty critters for their coats, their meat and even to make wine.

STING VICTIM Saleh al-Mahhlafi

By JOE BERGER
Staff writer

Anguished salesman Saleh al-Mahhlafi had a god-awful earache and couldn't figure out why till doctors took a look — and found a deadly scorpion hiding in his ear!

Then, to make matters worse, docs got the creepy critter so ticked off he stung Saleh in the ear canal and the terrified father of four had to be shot full of anti-toxin to save his life.

"What a nightmare that was!" the devastated dental supplies salesman later told reporters.

"Nothing ever hurt me that bad or scared me that much. I really thought I was going to be remembered as the guy who died because he got a big bug in his ear."

Unsuspecting Saleh's ordeal unfolded as he attended a sales convention in Riyadh, Saudi Arabia, hundreds of miles from his home in Unayzah.

"They put us in this hotel and it wasn't the best," the shook-up businessman said with a shudder. "There were bugs around and I didn't like it — but I didn't think any of those bugs could kill me. And I didn't think they'd be crawling in my ears while I slept."

Hapless Saleh, 34, spent the night in his flooding room and woke up with a throbbing earache.

"It hurt me all day long and by the next night I couldn't stand it anymore," said the horrified family man. "I went to the hospital. The doctor pulled around in my ear — and when he saw that scorpion, he almost fainted. Most scorpions can't kill you, but this kind was deadly and that doctor knew it."

The dumbfounded doc was so skittish he called in a colleague, and the two of them tried to pluck the poisonous bug from Saleh's ear.

"They were playing around in there and all of a sudden that thing stung me — and it hurt like somebody had set a bonfire in my ear," still-trembling Saleh recalled. "I let out a scream that everyone heard.

"Then they had to shoot me full of stuff just to keep me alive, and that made me feel even worse.

"But I tell you, I've learned my lesson. From now on when I travel, I go first class or I don't go at all. Economy class is just too darn dangerous."

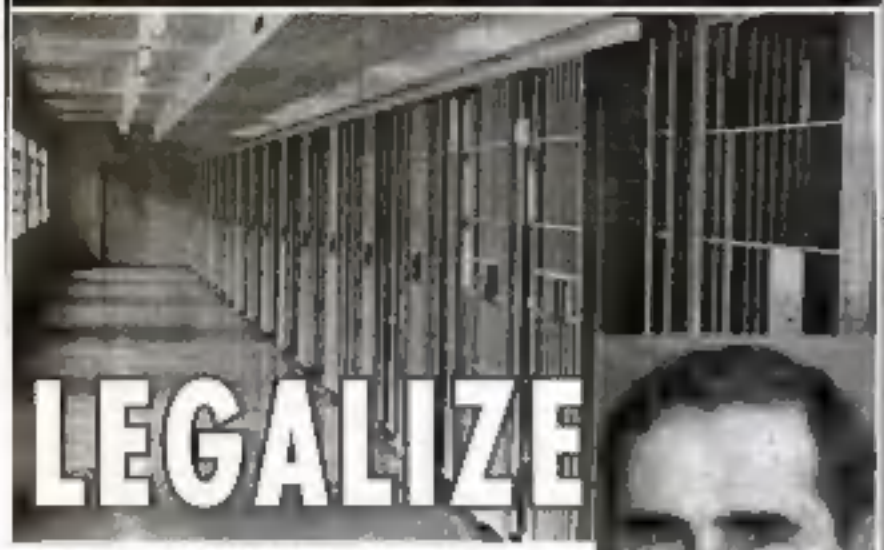
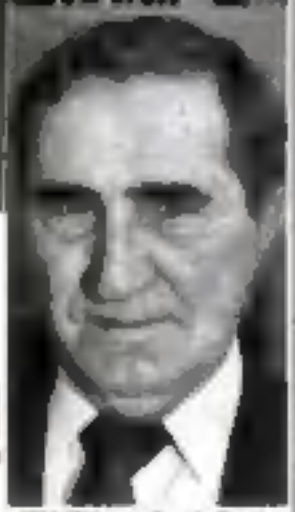
Empty jails & take the bums off the street...



LEGALIZE MURDER says nutty Texan!



KILL 'EM, says Ronnie Kranta, whose idea is gaining support.

By CARL STACK / Correspondent

Millionaire Ronnie Kranta has launched a dramatic crusade to ease overcrowding in America's prisons, get bums off our streets and stop crime in its tracks — by legalizing murder!

The 65-year-old Texan says citizens would be much better off if the government gave people permission to kill anybody, anytime, anywhere — without fear of arrest.

"If you can think of a better way to stabilize our population, get bums and criminals off our streets and clear out our jails I'd like to hear about it," the retired businessman said from his home west of Dallas. "After all, the police can't do it all," he added.

"If we want to keep this great country of ours from going to hell in a handbasket, the government has got to give decent citizens the right to take the law into their own hands.

"And I'm not talking about people making citizens' arrests, either. I'm talking about the legalization of murder."

Kranta's ideas might sound drastic but he claims to have substantial and growing grassroots support. On a speaking tour of 14 major cities earlier this year, some 1,500 people shelled out $25 each to join his organization, Citizens for the Legalization of Murder.

Kranta is also lobbying lawmakers on both state and federal levels and he says that several dozen legislators have expressed interest in his proposal.

That's not to say that everyone is keen on the idea — because they aren't. Critics say that the legalization of murder would destroy American society as we know it.

Kranta counters: "Innocent people would die if everyone had a license to kill but that would be a small price to pay for getting rid of the scum and trash who are [illegible] us down to the gutter.

"Once the parasites and criminals are eliminated from our society, decent people can focus all their attention on making themselves happy — and making America great again."

WHAT DO YOU THINK?

☐ Yes. I agree with Ronnie Kranta. We should be allowed to get rid of criminals and bums once and for all.

☐ No. We can't go around killing bums and crooks. We just have to learn to stay out of their way.

FLYING CHAMPAGNE CORK KILLS BRIDE!

By JOE BERGER
Staff writer

Blushing bride Sabrina Dousson and her jubilant groom Serge were whooping it up at their wedding reception when tipsy Serge popped open a bottle of bubbly — and the flying champagne cork struck Sabrina dead!

"God, it happened so fast. The thing just flew out of there and hit her in the head and she went down like she'd been shot," the horrified hubby later told reporters.

"It still seems so unreal. We'd only been married three hours and we were so excited, so happy. Then the next thing I knew, the woman I love is lying there dead and it's all my fault."

A medical examiner said the cork struck celebrating Sabrina in the left temple, causing a brain hemorrhage that killed the blue-eyed bride almost instantly.

"It was just one of those freak accidents that happen sometimes, a billion-to-one shot at least," said dumbfounded Dr. Gilbert Chastaine. "But it should be a warning to us all that a champagne cork may have a lot of pressure behind it — and can be just as deadly as a bullet if we're not careful."

Blushing Sabrina, 26, was struck down in front of hundreds of shell-shocked guests who'd gathered to watch the shapely secretary tie the knot with her stockbroker beau in Lyons, France.

"It had been a gorgeous ceremony and there was champagne all over the place," recalled Serge's heartsick sister Daniella. "They'd been going together for so many years and they were so in love, everybody was delighted to see them finally getting married.

"They had the reception at one of the best hotels in town and boy, the champagne was flowing like water. People were dancing and whooping it up and getting drunker by the minute. The party was just becoming a real blowout."

But the festivities turned fatal halfway through the evening when love-struck Serge, 30, decided to pop open a bottle of bubbly to toast his beaming bride.

"All of a sudden everyone started clamoring for a toast and when Serge looked around, he couldn't find an open bottle for some reason," devastated Daniella recalled.

"So he grabbed up one and started to open it — and all at once, the cork shot out of there like a rocket. Poor Sabrina was square on the side of the head. I mean, a hit her hard and she went down with a thud. It was so weird, people started laughing because they thought it was a joke — that hard as it was to believe. Her eyes rolled back in her head and suddenly everybody knew this was no joke — that hard as it was to Bungling hubby John Elner made a painful blunder when he reached for a tube of soothing lotion to rub on his chapped bottom, but grabbed superglue instead — and sealed his butt shut.

"My wife didn't tell me she had been mending her shoe in the bathroom and left the superglue out," said the sore-butt John. "I wasn't wearing my glasses. I just grabbed the tube and slapped the stuff on.

"Suddenly my hands were sticky and my butt was sealed tight."

His wife, Carol, burst out laughing when her horrified hubby hopped into the bedroom with his trousers around his ankles.

"It was hilarious. He looked so pathetic standing there with that painful look in his eyes. He refused to go to the hospital and I can't say I blame him."

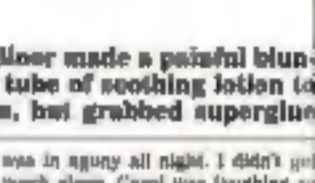
The hurting hubby spent the rest of the day and most of the night at his home in Silverdale, England, soaking his backside in warm water to melt the glue.

"Can you imagine walking into a hospital emergency room and telling perfect strangers your problem?

"Come to think of it, I'm not sure I could have walked in there."

Hours after the warm water unstuck his rear end, John, 41, said, "I was in agony all night. I didn't get much sleep. Carol was laughing so much the bed wouldn't stop shaking.

"It's still a pain in the butt to sit down."



WATER BUFFALO GORES OWNER!

Clyde Mullins reached out to touch the water buffalo he was about to sell when the beast went berserk — and gored him to death!

"The owner of the animal was using poor judgment to his way of thinking," said Marion, Mo. Police Chief Wayne Leathers. Mullins, 44, was showing the animal to potential buyers when the crazed buffalo attacked.

How to untangle teen talk

By JACK KENNEDY

Horace Easterwood looks like any other 85-year-old hermit with a glaring exception -- he has a 30-inch horn growing out of the middle of his head!

And while doctors insist that the bizarre appendage could be surgically removed in a simple outpatient procedure, the Nebraska man says he wouldn't dream of cutting it off because "this old horn might not be much to look at, but it's a big part of me."

"It doesn't bother me a bit," explained Easterwood, who proudly showed a ragged hole in a straw hat so he can slip it over the horn and down to his head.

"That's not to say that I've always liked it because there was a time when I would have given anything to be like everybody else. But once I got settled, I learned to accept myself for what I am."

As Easterwood pointed out, the horn was a great source of embarrassment when he was growing up near Omaha during the Great Depression. It was nothing more than a tiny bump on the top of his head at birth.

But it grew throughout his childhood. And even though he's now an old man, the horn, which is covered with wiry hair, is still growing today.

Scientists have never been able to explain what caused the horn to sprout from his head. But doctors confirm that it is made up of a protein called keratin, just like the horns of goats and cows.

"I cut myself with a hatchet a few years ago and had to go to the hospital to get sewed up," he said. "A couple of doctors said they would cut off my horn and let me go home the same day.

"I said, 'Nobody's cutting on my horn. If I just sat here, you [illegible]

STUTTERERS ARE S-S-S-SMARTER!

By RANDY JEFFRIES / Special correspondent

People who stutter like idiots when they speak are smarter than people who don't!

That's the word from psychologist Nils Lind, who conducted an intensive, six-year study of 3,500 men, women and children and found that stutterers outscore normal people on intelligence tests by an average of 22 points.

"I wasn't surprised by the findings — I was floored by the findings," the Swedish researcher told reporters. "Like most people, I had a lifelong bias against people with speech impediments possibly because they have so much trouble expressing themselves.

"When the results of my study first started coming in I actually thought that there was something wrong with my testing methods. But as time passed I realized that my methods were sound.

"In the final analysis, I found that stutterers as a group have IQs in the genius bracket. Even the stupidest stutterer I think most of us would do well to remember that when we are in the company of a stutterer," he added. "Chances are, he's going to be significantly smarter than we are."

Dr. Lind's conclusions might sound fantastic but the historical record and supporting studies seem to bear them out.

Historians confirm that brilliant scientists like Albert Einstein, Thomas Edison and Alexander Graham Bell stuttered. And recent studies show that 74 percent of the world's wealthiest men and women, as well as 68 percent of college professors, stutter, too.

"We're not entirely sure what makes stutterers more intelligent but there is some evidence to indicate that people stutter because they think faster and more deeply than people who speak normally," said Lind. "The stuttering comes about because thoughts are being generated so quickly that their speaking apparatus becomes overloaded."

Gutsy granny slugs thugs — [illegible] teapot!

Three thugs got the shock of their lives when they broke into the home of 86-year-old Fran Glickman — and the gutsy granny clobbered them with her teapot and showered them with scalding hot tea!

ARTIFICIAL CHRISTMAS TREES ARE FOR THE BIRDS!

MY AMERICA
By ED ANGER

You'll never find one in any house, says Ed!

I'm mad as hell and I'm not going to take it anymore.

My wife Thelma Jean and our eight daughters just waddled through the front door with a Christmas tree — a cardboard one, for crying out loud.

It's one of those damned artificial trees made out of nylon and nylon until it'll go with the living room carpet. Ugly as sin.

If God had wanted us to put up fake trees for Christmas, they'd grow that way by now.

Let's face it. About the only REAL thing with about

Now they're even pushing chemicals on you with sprays on these stupid artificial trees that make them smell like spruce or pine.

I only have an old fuddy-duddy judge but the Anger family will have no part of that kind of crap. I tell relatives this holiday if they have an artificial tree sitting in their living room. And I hope you and yours will do the same.

How the hell is this boycott going to work? Easy. When the urge hits to drive you over the local lumber store or a tree lot get away. We'll love to come over and help your presents but do not have an artificial tree! If they say yes, just hang up. Ham.

After a couple of calls, they get the picture, folks.

If we must band together now to save the old American tradition of live trees for Christmas we might as well get ready for anti-cut turkeys and cranberry sauce for Fido's supper.

And guess where all these artificial trees are made? Japan and Hong Kong, that's where.

Next thing you know we'll have a socialist Santa Claus. So get out the old ax and go chop down a tree this holiday.

Bad news for Japanese couples!

Wanna get married? It'll cost $67,000!

Couples in Japan don't even think about getting married unless they have $67,000 in the bank.

That's the average cost of getting hitched, says the Sanwa Bank after interviewing 800 Japanese newlyweds.

The amazing cost breakdown includes $9,484 for rings, $27,740 for the ceremonies and reception, $8,150 for the honeymoon and $14,400 for furniture, appliances, clothes and apartment rental.

Parents kicked in an average of $16,981, but 29 percent of the couples said they

WORKER KILLED — TYING HIS SHOE!

By JACK ALEXANDER
Correspondent

Construction hand Derek Hudson died when he bent over to tie his shoelace and cracked heads with a friend who bent over at the same time.

Hudson, 31, complained of feeling weak after the freak accident and was rushed to a hospital in Middlesbrough, England, where he died 11 days later.

"We had finished work and were changing our muddy clothes when I bent over to take off my shoes," co-worker Keith Barker said. "Derek had bent down at the same time and we banged heads. It was an amazing one in a million accident. We were both pretty stunned and kept on changing clothes." Barker added. "I didn't realize Derek was hurt until a few minutes later."

Two weeks before the incredible head knocking incident Derek had complained of painful migraine headaches, but he didn't take time off from work to see a doctor.

Neurosurgeon Ernest Sillas said a weak spot in a vein and that supplied blood to Derek's brain was damaged when he butted heads with his friend.

A brain scan taken a day after the bizarre accident revealed a blood clot.

"The blood could not have ruptured at any time without warning, even from roughing or shaving," Sillas said.

Derek and his buddy were working as industrial riggers for a construction company at the time of the bizarre mishap.

Throat cancer victim talks through his stomach

A language teacher who lost his throat and emphysema to cancer has learned to talk through his stomach, says the China Daily newspaper.

Zhu Renlin, 43, didn't think he could live another day after doctors performed cancer surgery in 1983.

But the courageous old man from Jinan, China, bucked back.

And with the help of new speech techniques, Zhu learned how to swallow air and then belch it out, creating a new sound.

Zhu learned how to manipulate larynx and air so that he could talk.

"I am very grateful to my doctors," said Zhu, whose speech, though weak and hoarse, is surprisingly clear. "You can't imagine what it was like for me being unable to speak. It was horrible. There were times when I didn't even want to live."

Dr Yang Renkhang, who heads up the Artificial Throat Research Group in Shadong, said, "Because we were able to raise Zhu's stomach and join it to the rest of the tongue, he is able to breathe normally and use the airflow to speak. It was a remarkable piece of surgery."

Supergrass never needs mowing!

By TANYA BROOKS / Special correspondent

Scientists have developed a new type of grass that never needs mowing — because it grows to the perfect height overnight and then stops!

The amazing new plant comes in green, red, blue and yellow and produces a gorgeous, velvet smooth lawn, according to the geneticists who developed it. They expect it to be widely available in the U.S. within two or three years.

Lawns grow to perfect height — then stop!

"We were working on a variety of grass that would produce excellent pasture in dry areas of the world," explained Dr. Norman Cadwallier, head of a team of Australian plant breeding experts who developed the miracle plant. "We wanted something that would stay short and close to the ground so that in sunlight zone where transpiration that we needed at the same time a very hardy plant that would spread and grow thick and lush.

"When we came up with this variety — which we call GP3 — we knew we had more than just a farm crop. This is a grass that will delight home owners everywhere. This is the perfect maintenance-free lawn grass."

Cadwallier says he and his team have perfected varieties of the grass in designer colors. The new grass rarely needs to be watered because it was designed to thrive in dry climates, the scientist says, and because it hugs the ground, it never needs a lawn mower.

"It is resistant to weeds, bugs and disease and it grows to its full height overnight. It's a real miracle grass from the point of view of the overworked homeowner."

Cadwallier and his colleagues have patented their astonishing creation which they developed by combining desert grasses from Africa and Australia — and plan to market the miracle ground cover in Australia early next year. They expect it to be available in the U.S. a year or two following its introduction in Australia.

Dog dines on master's false teeth!

Cubo the rocker spaniel doesn't care much for steak — but he's eaten his master's false teeth three times this year!

"I can hardly get that crazy dog to eat beef or any of the things most dogs eat — but anytime my dinnerers are within snarling distance, he goes right for them," flabbergasted farmer Claudia Perez told reporters outside Puerto Castello, Paraguay.

"After he made a meal out of them twice, I'd been trying to hide them from him, but he'd always find them. Then he started to bring them to me. I'd be sitting down to eat and he'd drop them in my lap. I'd throw them out the window and he'd jump out and get them. I'd lock them in the bedroom and he'd jump through the window to get them."

Perez said Cubo has also jumped from a table onto a 12-foot-high bookcase to get at them and polished them off before I could stop him.

Dear Dotti: My husband is a great guy but he drives like a maniac. He speeds, backs the cars constantly and runs red lights for the fun of it. He's literally a monster behind the wheel. What should I do? — Terrified in L.A.

Dear Terrified: I certainly don't advocate violence but I will say this: The last time I got behind the wheel with a guy who drove like that, I broke his nose! Maybe you should do the same!

Gals who sexually harass guys make me want to puke!

Dear Dotti: Everybody complains about men sexually harassing women on the job but I'm here to tell you that women harass men, too. It makes me sick to think about it. If a lady co-worker ever gets away with me, I'll have her thrown in jail! — Furious in Waukee

Dear Furious: I could say a lot of things in response to your letter but I'll keep it simple. Judging from the photo you sent, sexual harassment is the last thing you'll NEVER have to worry about!

Dotti will answer your letters — and hell to him if he has nothing to say, c/o Weekly World News, 600 South East Coast Ave., Lantana, Fla. 33462.

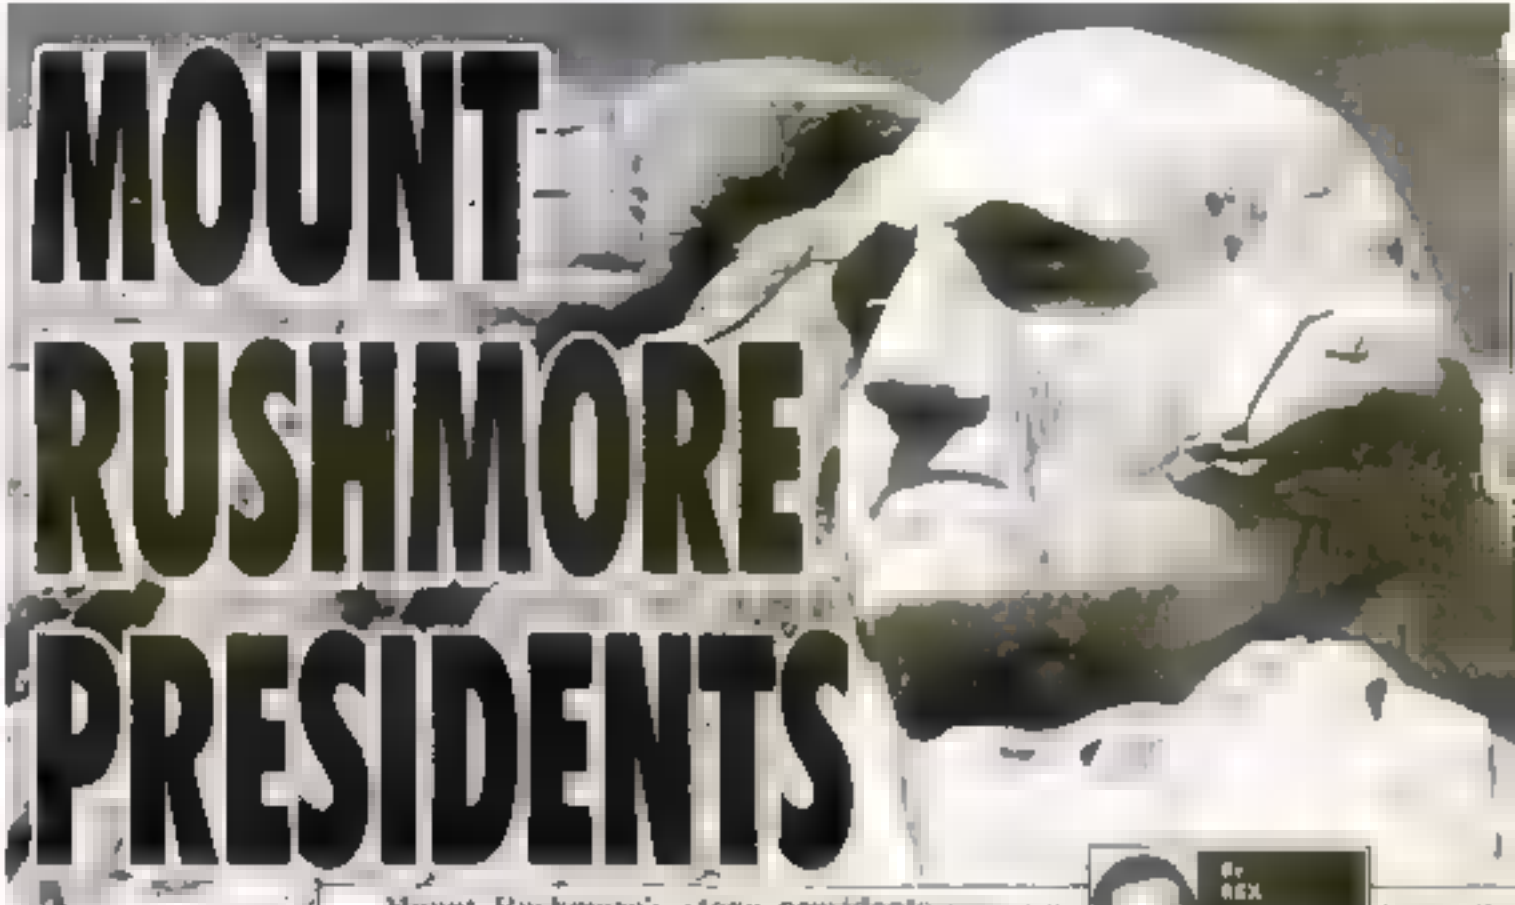
MOUNT RUSHMORE PRESIDENTS ARE CRYING



Mount Rushmore's stone presidents are crying real tears for the first time since President John Kennedy was assassinated in 1963. And while nobody has been able to explain the phenomenon, at least one expert believes that far from being sad, "the sculptures are crying tears of joy."

That's the word from geologist Robert Merrily who has been monitoring the situation since the tears first began to flow on October 24 and says he can figure out what is making the stone figures cry. Read on to learn more and why.

WOMAN MARRIES

by JOE MAGER
Staff writer

Dinghat divorcee Alice Lesson was so scared the landlord would evict her precious pussycat Harry that she called in a preacher — and made Harry her hubby!

"I figured he damn well couldn't kick the little fellow out of the apartment if we were married, so I invited some friends over and we had the most beautiful wedding you ever saw," gushed the blushing bride.

"Hell, I love Harry more than any of the creeps who've asked me out during the past two years anyway, so it works out just fine as far as I'm concerned. Now if that old man tells me to get rid of him, I'll sue his butt off."

Blissfully happy Alice, 33, decided to tie the knot with her tabby after her landlord notified her that Harry would have to hit the road by the end of the month.

"I've had Harry for a year and he hasn't caused the slightest bit of trouble for anybody, but all of a sudden he decides to change the rules on us," the tickled-pink office worker told reporters in Rochester, N.Y.

"I can't afford to move but I sure didn't want to give up my little buddy, either. Well, I started looking through my lease real careful and I noticed it said I couldn't take in a roommate except my spouse in the event I married.

"So I said, 'Harry, take a bath and get yourself all dolled up — because you and me are going to a wedding.'"

And 10 days later, dressed in a shimmering white gown, the teary-lipped lady stood before a preacher and promised to love and obey her shivering bride for as long as they both shall live.

"It was a gorgeous wedding, absolutely gorgeous," wacky Alice insisted.

"My Harry had his little bow tie on and he looked absolutely handsome as could be.

JOYFUL bride Alice Lesson married her cat Harry in a simple ceremony performed by Rev. Collin Weber. Alice's best friend Mary Tyrone served as bridesmaid. Below newlyweds Alice and Harry share a toast.

A severed finger is a status symbol among Japanese mobsters, but many of them are going "straight" now — and are begging doctors to replace the missing fingers.

Slicing off the little finger has long been a mob ritual designed to keep wayward underlings in line. Crooks cut off their own fingers to impress the boss — and strike fear in their enemies.

A tough new anti-crime law has prompted many of Japan's gangsters to become law abiding citizens. But the missing digit is hurting their chances of finding a legitimate job.

Gordon Chance Jr., 43, was shot in the head [illegible] and back by Jack Thomas, a retired California highway patrolman, who was acquitted of second-degree murder.

The feud came to a head when Chance sawed down the 4-foot fence Thomas had built along their property line.

Thomas called the sheriff and Chance was carted off to jail.

Thomas, 66, was rebuilding his fence later the same day when Chance returned home after getting bail. When Thomas saw Chance approaching him with "a metal or object in his hand," he pulled out a pistol and shot him three times.

Defense lawyer Fred Hagman characterized Chance as a "loony," who had threatened Thomas in the past, according to trial testimony.

"Someday I'm going to make headlines when I take out you and your family and that fence," Chance told the ex-cop.

Thomas said Chance, an angry neighbor approaching him with the metallic object, he thought Chance had a weapon and was going to carry out the threat.

RUNS THE WORLD'S TOUGHEST FAT FARM

. . . where weight-loss is GUARANTEED!

By RICK TRACY

"Lose Weight or Else" is the menacing motto at the world's toughest fat farm — owned and ruled by a band of naked biker gang!

"When you sign a contract and walk through the front gates, your butt belongs to us for as long as it takes to trim you down," said bearded biker boss Sebastian Hendrix, 32-year-old leader of the Satan's Slaves motorcycle gang who operate the farm as "The Enforcer."

"Each time you're gone to hell after a diet. Because this will not fail. High-priced health spas in the Hollywood hills that claim to be the toughest. Maybe beat some pounds off, but never trim a pound.

We believe the human body can only take just so much pain and suffering, and we find that the only way to the limit for the health and well being of our guests," said Hendrix.

"We don't promise to be trimmed down rule models. We force them to do what we say, not what we like."

COOKING WITH TOOTHPASTE

Creative cook Martha Bourne wants you to sink your teeth into something really delicious: Mouth-watering dishes made with toothpaste!

The Arkansas housewife says cakes, cookies, gelatin, iced tea and even sweet potatoes can be combined with ordinary mint-flavored toothpaste for extra zest and interest. What's more, the mouth-watering concoctions are inexpensive and easy to make, the 40-year-old chef says.

By TANYA BRODER
Contributing Writer

"People don't take to the idea right off, but once they try the recipes they go nuts over them," said Martha, who lives in Little Rock. "They're so scrumptious, so moist, and they have a wonderfully unusual texture."

I have been cooking with pastes with these delicacies ever since and I'm planning to compile them all and put them out in a cookbook sometime next year."

TOOTHPASTE adds a zesty mint flavor to banana bites.

Martha says she first discovered the joys of toothpaste cookery five years ago when she bought a case of a popular mint-flavored toothpaste on special at a discount warehouse.

Worried that the huge supply would go bad before she could use it all, she decided to add a teaspoonful of toothpaste to her mixes for brownies and found the result delicious. After that, she began testing a whole batch of toothpaste recipes, many of which turned out absolutely wonderful, she says.

Next (or Weekly World News, December 30, 1980)

TOOTHSOME SWEET POTATOES

- 4 sweet potatoes
- ¼ pound butter or margarine
- 1 cup mini-marshmallows
- ½ cup orange juice
- 1 Tbsp. mint-flavored toothpaste
- ½ tsp. cinnamon
- ½ cup brown sugar

Peel and cut sweet potatoes into 1-inch chunks and steam in orange juice. When tender, combine with other ingredients except sugar. Spoon mix into layered casserole dish, sprinkle sugar on top and bake for ½ hour or until browned on top.

TOOTHPASTE CUKES

- 1 cucumber, sliced thinly
- 1 Tbsp. sugar
- 1 tsp. mint-flavored toothpaste
- 1 Tbsp. vinegar
- Dash salt

Mix all ingredients together, chill in refrigerator for ½ hour. Serve as a salad with grilled meats or shishkebab.

WRITE A SONG — AND BRING ELVIS PRESLEY OUT OF HIDING!

The whole world knows that Elvis Presley didn't die in 1977 and is still alive today, and at least one expert believes that The King will finally come out of hiding — if someone writes a song that's good enough for him to sing!

Author William Stern has spent the past few years convinced that The King will come out of hiding and start performing again. And Stern is convinced that The King will come out of hiding sooner rather than later if sometone can pen a tune "that he can't turn to sing."

"I'm not sure what kind of song would motivate Elvis to start performing again but I imagine that it would be similar to one of the great tunes he sang over the course of his career," said Stern, who has investigated over 2,000 Elvis sightings and written extensively on The King since his alleged death in 1977.

SCIENTIST CREATES MUTANT VINE — & IT STRANGLES HIM!

By TONY CASSIDY • Special correspondent

An outcast German botanist was brutally strangled and partly devoured — by a hideous flesh-eating vine he had created in his Amazon jungle laboratory!

Dr. Franz Zeitung, a respected botanist until his bizarre experiments with carnivorous plants earned him the scorn of the scientific world, was found wrapped like a mummy in the tentacles of a grotesque, 9-foot-tall vine he had grown from a mutated seed.

When found by his longtime research assistant, Eva Reiter, parts of Zeitung's body were slowly being dissolved by the vine's deadly stalks.

"It was horrible. I've had terrible nightmares ever since I found him," the 40-year-old assistant told reporters in Belo Horizonte, Brazil.

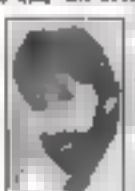
"The vine was writhing and undulating as though in ecstasy. I swear I could actually hear it moaning with pleasure.

"Dr Zeitung must have died an agonizing death.

"His face was twisted and contorted and his eyes were bulging from their sockets. His mouth was gaping open. His skin had no color.

"All of the blood had been absorbed by the vine."

9-foot plant wrapped his body like a mummy!



DR FRANZ ZEITUNG

In his laboratory in Munich, Dr Zeitung — determined to wipe out world hunger — had hoped his research would eventually create a super species of vegetables. But academic colleagues refused him grants, money and respect because his work in the secrecy of the Amazon jungle, Miss Reiter said.

"But the heat and the lonely solitude were driving him mad. He began to think he was God," she continued.

"He gave up his noble cause and he quit injecting the jungle vines by creating them with flesh-eating plants similar to the Venus flytrap.

"And he created monstrous vines that thrived on the flesh of animals that he fed them. And the more they got, the more they wanted. I was afraid to go near them.

"Their branches were like arms reaching out for me. I knew that if they had been able to grab me they would have eaten me.

"I warned him to be careful. That sooner or later they would turn on him. But he scoffed at my warnings. He called me a fool.

"But they did get him. And now he is dead."

Police concluded that the 45-year-old doctor's death was "a tragic accident."

Dr Zeitung's laboratory was destroyed in the struggle with the killer plant. Police said the botanist was killed by creating a jungle vine with a flesh-eating plant

New drug made from dried tiger dung cures alcoholism

Chinese alcoholics are kicking the bottle for good with the help of a gut-churning "natural" medicine: Tiger poop!

The big cats' droppings are dried, ground into a fine powder and served up in wine to drinks who don't respond to more usual therapies. Believers in Chinese traditional medicine swear that the mixture turns down-and-out boozers into teetotalers in no time.

"My husband used to drink himself into a stupor every night and I was at my wit's end trying to deal with him," says Ling Shu Wan, 42, a mother of one from Beijing.

"Then I mixed a little tiger dung in his wine and served it to him one night.

"I couldn't believe the results. Peng stopped drinking immediately. He said that the very thought of booze made him sick.

"That was four months ago and he hasn't had a drop of the stuff since."

Gathering tiger dung has become big business in China, where the cat poop sells for as much as $157 an ounce.

Each month, hundreds of persons living in mountainous regions of the country scour the hills where wild tigers roam, collecting cat droppings for profit.

And municipal zoos around the country make hefty incomes from the smelly stuff.

"We have an unlimited demand for tiger dung because China has so many millions of customers," said Dr Huang Chi-Ping, head of an alcoholic treatment program in Wuhan.

"Our studies have shown that the dung affects alcohol metabolism in some way, causing alcohol to make drinkers sick.

"What's more, the sickness caused by the dung appear to be permanent. Once turned off drinking, most people never want to try it again."

Tiger poop has been used in Chinese traditional medicine for centuries, Ping says, but only recently has it been tried on alcoholics.

Scientists are hoping to develop a synthetic form of the substance, but until then tigers will be extremely valuable for their ability to produce the wonder drug.

"We've already seen two cases of tiger rapping in which thugs stole the animals from city zoos so they could extract a supply of dung for sale," Ping said.

"The stuff may not be pretty, but it's like gold on the market."

HUMAN COMPUTER MEMORIZES 650,000 PHONE NUMBERS!

AMAZING Gou Yunting has a mind like a computer

By SANDRA LEE, in China

A Chinese telephone operator with a mind like a computer can recite from memory an incredible 650,000 phone numbers — and she memorizes thousands more every week.

The Beijing wonder woman gave an exhibition of her amazing memory before a crowd of 400 astounded scientists, repeating without a mistake the numbers of businesses and homes in 10 cities around China, says the Xinhua News Agency.

"She is a remarkable memory machine," said Chi Yung, a participant in the conference who watched amazing Gou Yunting, 28, demonstrate her skills. "She is like a human computer; she doesn't even hesitate before repeating a number."

"She recalled hundreds of numbers that were randomly chosen from books with 650,000 phone numbers and she didn't miss a single one they asked her to give."

The attractive young lady says she began memorizing telephone numbers in 1985 when she took a job as an information operator in the very busy central Beijing exchange.

Each week she stored away hundreds of numbers in her computer-like brain so that she wouldn't need to look them up in regional phone books.

The numbers she has filed away in her mind include private residences, businesses, government offices and professional associations.

Miss Gou, who has a photographic memory, says she "reads" them when she calls them up in her mind.

"I remember them in the order they appear in the phone directory," the young operator said. "Every time I add a new number, I just put it in its proper sequence. I remember numbers from different cities in separate lists so I don't get confused."

Miss Gou has become a celebrity in her town after publicity about her talent, but at first it got her in trouble.

"My supervisor noticed that I rarely used the listings and he thought I wasn't doing my job properly," the memory whiz recalled.

"When I explained that I remembered most of the numbers, he didn't believe me. But when I allowed him what I could do, he was just amazed.

"He told everybody about what I can do — he made me famous."

Husbands don't do housework — but it's the wives' fault!

A new worldwide study says husbands don't do enough housework — but it's the wives' fault.

In most homes women do 62 percent of the housework, says the report by the International Center for Social Security and about to delegate different household jobs.

They want the sheets folded a certain way, the bed made "just so" and dishes properly dinner isn't cooked exactly the way they'd think it.

So most of these women would rather do the jobs themselves — and the husbands are

A UFO kidnapped a herd of elephants from a safari park while horrified witnesses watched!

"We didn't know what to make of it," Police Detective Oscar Moreno told reporters in Lagos Spain. "It's like something out of a science fiction movie.

"But 40 people witnessed the abduction. And the fact is 24 elephants are missing."

The dumpy, saucer-like craft hovered in broad daylight as the terrified herd tried to escape. According to the witnesses, a 240-foot UFO with purple lights swirled in ghostly mist as members over the park.

Then it sprayed the grazing elephants with a bluish-orange light and pulled all 24 into its belly.

"At first I thought the whole thing was being staged when the UFO first appeared," said Imelda Gil Cáceres, who was dancing through the park with her children.

"But when the elephants started rising up in the air I knew it wasn't a joke. The kids were laughing but I was terrified."

Stunned tourists see saucer suck up zoo's prized animals!

"I wanted to put the car in reverse and back away, but I was too frightened."

The entire incident lasted less than 30 seconds, witnesses said. After that the alien ship, which was silver and shaped like an upside-down bowl, disappeared.

Officials at the safari park refused to give any comment on the alleged abduction.

But Madrid-based UFO researcher Jose Diaz Palacat has spoken at length on the case. He says aliens have abducted over 200 earthlings from space in the past six months.

"Hardly a week passes when we don't hear of at least one report of an animal abduction. The extraterrestrials obviously have a growing interest in Earth and our animal life."

Schoolkids threatened: 'Mr. Scissors will cut out your tongues and livers!'

New York teachers get the [redacted] for scaring noisy third-graders

One terrified little girl had horrible nightmares after two third-grade teachers threatened to punish rowdy students — by cutting out their tongues and livers.

Teachers Lynne Strumlok and Joanne Herschkorn have apologized and said they were just kidding when they told the 7- and 8-year-olds that "Mr. Scissors" (a real pair of scissors) would remove their tongues and livers. "Mr. Scissors" was kept in the teachers' desk drawer.

An angry mother said a youngster was hauled before his classmates and forced to don a mask that covered his nose and mouth, which one of the teachers described as a "blood catcher" for the removal of tongues.

By JACK ALEXANDER
Staff writer

One of the teachers was quoted as telling the little kids the tongue would be first and then the livers.

One parent became outraged when her little girl asked such weird questions as, "Can someone talk without a tongue?"

"How much of your childhood do you have to cut to take out someone's liver?"

Needless to say, parents of the third graders were hopping mad when they learned of the bizarre threats.

Jacqueline Jones complained to the Syracuse (N.Y.) city school system, claiming her daughter Lisa, 8, was traumatized by the threats, had nightmares and was being treated by a therapist.

"These two teachers were way out of step," said her lawyer Francis Walker.

"The threat needs a strong message to everybody in the classroom.

"Whether it was said as black humor or as just doesn't matter.

"These 7-year-olds are very impressionable," Walker added.

"It's appalling," said one state psychologist.

"A teacher is supposed to engender feelings of safety and security. These teachers have done the opposite."

The mother of one 8-year-old said it's child brought nightmares to school and threatened to cut someone's tongue out, the child would be suspended. "You look at the faces of these little children and wonder if inside, they've scared to death," she said.

The two Delaware Academy teachers have been suspended without pay, now for eight months and the other for two months.

Joanne Herschkorn has been teaching 11 years. Lynne Strumlok, five years. School officials would give no further details.

Don't snort the toothpaste!

The government of Peru plans to produce a high-powered new toothpaste — from the green leaf used to make cocaine!

Peruvian officials insist that coca is harmless in its leaf form and is a potent weapon against tooth decay.

Many of the country's coca [illegible] have routinely chewed coca for centuries to fight off hunger and fatigue — without demonstrating any ill effects, say authorities.

"It has been proven that 90 percent of the people who chew coca have very good teeth," said Juan Vasquez, manager of Enaco, the government's National Coca Company.

Enaco oversees the legal harvest of 15,000 tons of coca each year.

An additional 65,000 tons of the stuff are harvested illegally, converted into cocaine and smuggled into America and Europe.

If the zingy new toothpaste is a hit, Peru may also begin producing coca chewing gum,

Teen girl bleeds to death — from bullet she didn't know hit her!

By JACK ALEXANDER
Staff writer

Pals loving Holly Ann Stiffler slowly bled to death after being shot in the abdomen — and she wasn't even aware she'd been wounded until an hour after it happened.

The popular 15-year-old Texarco had accompanied friends to a party at a warehouse in Fort Lauderdale, Fla.

Two cars began fighting and shots were fired. One of the bullets struck Holly, who slumped to the floor.

"We thought Holly had passed out," said Shirley Schneider, 17.

"She woke her up and asked if she had been shot. She said, 'No, no.' And we didn't see any blood."

Holly and her friends left the party and drove to a home in Coral Gables. An hour later, Holly realized she was bleeding and her friends rushed her to a hospital.

There, she underwent surgery — nearly three hours after she was shot.

"Obviously she was bleeding internally, but no one was aware of it until it was too late," said a police officer investigating the shooting.

Partygoers gave police descriptions of two men who could have been involved in the gunfire according to Detective Timothy Bronson. But no one has been arrested.

The warehouse is owned by a musician who uses it to practice with his band. He said they also use the warehouse for weekend parties, charging $5 a person.

The dead teen's dad sobbed quietly as he mourned the loss of his daughter, who he called his "fishing buddy, who lit up the room with her smile."

"She happened to be in the wrong place at the wrong time and took a bullet that was meant for somebody else," Bronson said.

Violent flicks turn men into monsters!

Researchers have revealed a frightening fact about men who watch brutal, sexual movies — they're becoming heartless perverts.

Men who viewed such savage movies as I Spit on Your Grave and Texas Chain Saw Massacre for five straight days, weren't even repelled by the violence and gore.

"The men actually became more indifferent to the violence as the days went on," said expert Daniel Linz.

But the most startling discovery came when the same men were questioned after watching a film of a rape trial. Their attitude seemed to be, "The victim got what she deserved."

DAD MISSING FOR 11 YEARS FOUND — AT BOTTOM OF RIVER!

By DICK DONOVAN, Staff writer

The skeletal remains of Richard Lena, a family-loving father of two who mysteriously vanished in 1981, were found in his submerged car by police divers searching for stolen guns — in a river just a couple of miles from his home!

The grisly discovery was the answer to a prayer for Lynnette Lena, his widow, and to Evelyn Lena, his mother, two women who never believed for a minute that Richard had deserted his family.

"I figured that someday I'd know what happened to him," Lynnette said. "If it took until the day I died, I was going to know. They had him in all kinds of places and here they found him almost at our back door."

In the early morning of Dec. 12, 1981, Richard Lena 34, left a local tavern and headed for his home near Johnson Creek. He never arrived.

Richard's strange disappearance soon sparked talk that he had abandoned his family and was living in Florida. Another wild rumor said he was a drug dealer and had been murdered.

As weeks turned into months and months into years, the rumors faded. Lynnette went to work to support herself and the girls, Gayle and Jennifer. Then 6 and 8, and in time, the pain of their loss became bearable.

But their faith in Richard's love never faltered and, just a few weeks ago, the tragic truth of what really happened came to light.

The mystery was unraveled when police divers searching for guns taken in an unrelated burglary came across Richard's car parked on end at the bottom of the Black River.

Human remains found scattered on the front seat were positively identified as his and an autopsy revealed he had drowned.

It's now believed that Richard left the tavern and had driven less than a mile when his car apparently careened out of control, plowed 150 feet down an embankment and plunged into the icy waters of the river.

It took 11 lonely, heartbreaking years, but time has at last proven that his wife's and mom's unflinching faith in Richard's love for his family had not been misplaced.

Now there can be no more rumors, no more doubts. When Richard vanished that cold December morning 11 years ago, he wasn't deserting his family he was going home!

INDIA'S TRAGIC TIGER WIDOWS!

Man-eaters kill 5,000 men — from one town!

MOURNING widows live with the constant fear and sorrow brought by the vicious man-eating Bengal tigers.

By MICKEY McGUIRE

A dark cloud of terror hangs over Arampur, India, where marauding Bengal tigers have killed and eaten so many men that the village is known as Bidhava Palli — "the village of tiger widows!"

At least 5,000 women in Arampur have lost their husbands, who have fallen victim to the savage beasts that prowl the nearby jungle day and night.

And because the Bengal tiger is listed as an endangered species, the pitiful townspeople — now more "endangered" than their tormentors — can do nothing that would harm their vicious killers.

But when a man — usually a husband and father — is dragged into the jungle and eaten, his widow gets a paltry $300 as government compensation for her loss.

"What are we to do?" one fingernail-chewing woman asked, shaking her head in despair. "We must feed our families and to do that we must go to the jungle. We are very poor, so the tigers are never far away. There is nothing we can do but pray to the gods to protect us from them."

The government's efforts to protect the town were nothing more than palliatives. It fenced the jungle around Arampur with barbed wire, but the tigers just leaped over it. Then it built a 20-foot ditch — proving that nothing could keep the tigers out.

Finally, it offered a bounty of $10 for each tiger killed. But the hunters who tried to collect the bounty found that the tigers were too clever to be caught in traps.

Then the government offered a bounty of $20 for each tiger killed. But the hunters who tried to collect the bounty found that the tigers were too clever to be caught in traps.

"It was supposed to put the fear of man back into the tigers," a woman said. "But a healthy tiger fears nothing."

When the dumpsites failed, the villagers were given masks to wear on the back of their heads to confuse the tigers, which government experts claimed would attack from the rear.

But the masks, like the bounty, failed miserably. Now, the government does nothing to help the town.

Conservationist Records claims that 5,000 men have been killed by the protected Bengals since 1976.

"A few years ago someone said, 'This is not Arampur. It is Bidhava Palli — the village of the tiger widows,'" recalled one townsperson. "That evil name has stayed with us."

Schoolkids using space-age watches cheat exams!

Shifty high school students have found a deadly new space-age way to cheat. They're programming text answers into their digital wristwatches.

The rearranged watches come with keyboards that let users record up to 4,000 letters or numbers — then recall them with the touch of a button.

Schoolkids across America have found ingenious ways to cheat — and many — think setup answers in the palm of their hands.

"I've always said if they spend as much time studying as they did figuring out ways to cheat, they'd wind up learning a heckuva lot more," said one angry Wisconsin teacher.

Britain's Queen Elizabeth has been having a run of bad luck, with her castle burning down and her problems with the royal family. And this isn't starting out as such a good day for her either as she prepares to lay a wreath of poppies at a memorial in London — unaware that she has a 3-foot streamer of toilet paper stuck to her royal heel. The officer beside her obviously has noticed Her Majesty's predicament but hasn't figured out a way to solve the problem discretely. Fortunately, it solved itself seconds later as the paper fell off.

ONE BY ONE . . . Death well swallows 8 teen girls!

By Tanya Brooks Correspondent

Eight teenage girls died tragically after they climbed into a well to retrieve a lost wallet — and were electrocuted one by one by an exposed pump wire.

"Apparently each one thought the ones in the well were playing a trick on her and went down to see what her friends were doing," said Peter Kardza, a police inspector in Novi Sad, Yugoslavia, where the multiple deaths occurred.

"It was so dark in the bottom of the well that there was no way to see from above what was going on.

"The girls climbed down a metal ladder on the side of the stone well and when they hit the second rung from the bottom they were zapped with 5,000 volts of electricity.

TEENAGER Pedro Miranda — on the way to the

SECONDS later he [illegible] was electrocuted

"They were dead in seconds," Kardza said. "But the girls died quickly with souls and just fell in a heap on top of each other."

Kardza says the November 21 accident came about after the girls stopped to take money in the well for good luck. One of the eight is said to be Sonja Pedro Miranda dropped her wallet into the well and dared one to go down after it. When she did not reappear and did not answer her friends' calls, the best friend ran home crying and told her parents what had happened.

The other six bereaved girls in the group followed one by one, as the parents say. "It appears that the girls died quickly with [illegible] was like a relief."

Kardza said, "So their friends above had no idea what was happening. The exposed pump wire carried such a jolt that they didn't have a chance."

"The girls' families started calling us when they didn't come home that evening and we followed their tracks to the well. We shined a flashlight down there and saw the bodies. So we knew something was terribly wrong at the bottom."

"That's the only reason our officer didn't suffer the same fate the girls did."

Families of the dead girls have planned a memorial service at which all the teenagers will be honored, Kardza said.

They will be buried side by side in the city cemetery.

PRIEST TURNS INTO REAL-LIFE ZORRO TO FOIL COCAINE CREEPS!

Drug dealers call pistol-packin' padre 'the Holy Terror'

By HUGH CASTLES / Special correspondent

Colombian cocaine kingpins have put a $1 million bounty on the head of a gun-slingin' Catholic priest who has cost their business a fortune by hijacking supply trains, blowing up drug factories and freeing slave-workers.

Known by locals as "Padre Muerte" or Father Death, the priest cost the cocaine barons an estimated $30 million in profits the past year, said Col. Jorge Ramerez, leader of an anti-drug squad with the Colombian Army.

Incredibly, Father Death is such a slick shot, he's never had to kill. Wearing a mask and cape like TV hero Zorro and riding a coal-black horse, he single-handedly hijacks drug caravans and disarms guards by shooting the weapons out of their hands with his twin pearl-handled .45 automatics.

His grim figure and skill with a gun strikes fear in the hearts of drug operators in the mountainous area around the town of La Plata.

"Already, he's ambushed four deliveries that we know about, and last March he blew up a major jungle cocaine factory, liberating more than 30 slave-workers," said Col. Ramerez.

"Drug dealers call him 'the Holy Terror.' We believe he is a local priest, but no one knows his identity for sure." Not only have the drug barons in the southern part of the country posted a $1 million bounty for the sharpshooting man of God, they've also started a public relations campaign against him.

They claim the priest's anti-drug crusade is plunging the people into poverty.

"This man is a menace to the peace and prosperity of our country," said Raul Mendez, a spokesman for the syndicate of drug kingpins. "Our country is poor and our people are starving. Our business employs thousands of peasants, putting rice and beans on the table for their families to eat. But this fanatic priest is threatening the livelihood of these poor people. His work is counterproductive."

FATHER DEATH wears a mask and cape just like the screen hero Zorro.

THE PHANTOM

By [illegible] / Correspondent

Country music superstar Patsy Cline died in a plane crash nearly 30 years ago, but Patsy's grinning ghost still prowls the stage of the Grand Ole Opry — and even belts out songs for her flabbergasted fans!

"I saw Patsy, no doubt about it — standing up there singing I Fall to Pieces, just like she'd never left us," said staggered Annie Fulton, 50.

"Her voice was so real, so beautiful, it was hard to believe she was just a ghost. But as soon as I tried to get a little closer, the singing stopped and she just vanished into thin air.

"The whole thing sent goose bumps down my spine."

Flamboyant Patsy played to packed houses at the Ryman from 1960 till she died in a plane crash in 1963 at the age of 31.

The Opry has moved to larger quarters now and the Ryman stands silent.

Still, 100,000 fans flock to the auditorium each year to stare in awe at the stage where greats like Kitty Wells, Hank Williams and Ernest Tubb made music for so many years.

And more than a few swear Patsy Cline's still making sweet music there.

"Fans are always saying they saw that little gal hanging out at the Ryman, and I'm here to tell you it's true — 'cause I've seen her myself," insisted a mystified Music City bigwig.

"She was standing back in the wings in one of those fancy buckskin dresses of hers, just leaning against the wall like she was waiting to go onstage.

MECHANIC Art Coulter says seeing Patsy's ghost was spooky. "I thought for a second I was going crazy."

'Her voice was so real, so beautiful — then she vanished into thin air'

It was like seeing an old friend I hadn't seen in years and I wanted to walk up and say 'hi' to her.

"But suddenly she flashed me that big old Patsy Cline smile and just faded away.

ghosts but I guess if Patsy's ghost was going to be anywhere, it'd be right there, because she had some of the happiest times of her life there.

"But just seeing her after so many years is gonna be pretty eerie for anybody."

And for Minneapolis mechanic Art Chotter, the experience was particularly spooky.

"Patsy's my all-time favorite singer, and I was standing there in the Ryman with my wife and kids telling them about how I came to Nashville and saw her in '61," the baffled dad recalled.

"And all of a sudden, I swear there she was, right back up on that stage singing Walkin' After Midnight, just like she did 31 years ago.

"I thought for a second I was going crazy but I could tell by the look on my family's faces that they were seeing and hearing her, too.

"My daughter is 21 and she started accusing me of playing some kind of trick on them. But I said, 'Honey, don't blame me. I think Patsy's playing a little trick on all of us.'"
